IDEA OF DR. F. F. EDDY THE VALUE OF OIL PAVING

GIVES HIS VIEWS ON AN IMPOR- FUNDAMENTAL RULES TO BE TANT SUBJECT.

At Unitarian hall yesterday the usual Bervices were held. Miss Nellie Mahan sang the offertory solo, "The Brighter Day," and Unity quartette rendered

The sermon of Rev. Frank Fay Eddy liscussed a question recently raised in the Sunday school class, "Will the World Ever Have a Universal Religion?" To briefly summarize Mr. Eddy's discourse, he said:

"The world never has had, and quite probably never would have a saiversal church, but it now has and always has had a universal religion. The great in soul and pure in heart have always and everywhere found a religion that was substantially the same, that was founded on the same great universals, knew the same ethics and fostered the same hopes and ideals." He went on to show how all attempts to gain institutional or ecclesiattempts to gain institutional or eccles astical unity had failed and were fount to fail. In conclusion, Mr. Eddy said:

Mankind Demands Variety.

"Our conclusion then may be that the world will not have a universal church this side of the millenial dawn. Nothing is more impossible, and few things more impossible, and few things more undesirable, than that any single ecclesiastical institution should be the soverign mistress of the religious destinies of all the race of men. May the dream of the Protestant zealot, the vision of Rome and the hope of the Mussulman perish together, or at least fall far short of reality. The world has never had a universal church, and no greater misfortune could befall it than that it should have. "But the world has had a universal religion as long as man has roamed its surface. All religions came out of the soul of man, and none of them expressed, except in part, the great universals. Yet all of them did express in broken and all point in the same general direction. The truths of ethics are like the truths of mathematics, the same everywhere. The attitude of the soul of a worshiper was the same before Moloch's shrine as in Jehovah's temple.

Soul of Man Always the Same.

"Because the soul of a man is the same in all times and climes; because he apprehends the same body of truth in similar concepts and because his conscience, much as it may differ as to particular applications, evolves in the same way atways and everywhere, for these reasons the great in mind and the pure in heart find in all ages a certain common faith a religion universal, infinite in its visions, all satisfying in its consolations. There is a kinship of soul that unites such as these, and time and space, creeds and institutions are poweriess to separate them. Jesus and Buddha, Confucius and Socrates, Arminius and Channing, Savanarola and Beeceher, Spinoza and Martineau clasp hands aeross the centuries, all living exponents of that religion universal that is indestructible because its foundation is universal truth. They doffed the garments of a part, to be enfolded in the vesture of the whole." Because the soul of a man is the same Elder John M. Mills of the Latter-day Elder John M. Mills of the Latter-day saints university reviewed the history of he Book of Mormon at the meeting in the abernacie yesterday afternoon. He spoke for about an hour. Elder Joseph E. Tayor spoke for about twenty minutes on doctrinal points. During the services the choir sang "Zion Stands With Hills Surrounded," "Glory to God on High." Light and Truth" and "Let the Mountains Shout for Joy." President William McLachlan of Pioneer stake gave the invocation, and Patriarch John Smith propunced the benediction.

The paving of the third class, however, is the one adopted at Riverside as being the most satisfactory. Mr. Seburn emphatically recommended it as being substantially recommended it has proved itself to be quite adequate. This kind of road is not likely to need any repairs for some years. In this respect it is very economical. It costs only one-fifth as much as sphaltum paving, and is practically as good. Little Pest Runs Amuck During the

In the discourses during the services in the Tabernacle yesterday afternoon. The presence of the "little beastie" was manifested first in the upper right hand corner of the women's side of the choir. To the everlasting credit of the young singers be it made known that not one of them screamed. Still, flesh and blood remarkable that the girls did a little jumping around. The course of the mouse could be traced easily down the tier of seats along the south rail by watching the movements of the singers. As the word passed down the line, skirts were gathered closer, while frantic squirmings and vigorous downward "swipes" with handkerchiefs notified the horrid moust that his presence was not desired. Clear to the bottom of the south row and part way across the front row of the women's section the suppressed jumps indicated the whereabouts of the mouse, whose explorations had not ended when the services closed.

Kaysville, Nov. 18.—There have been persistent rumors afloat this week that an effort would be made to have the recent municipal election declared invalid. The claim is made that the city council acted without authority in designating but one polling place in the city, whereas the city embraces part of two voting districts, each with one polling place. At the last election two judges were appointed from voting district No. 1, where all the voting was done, and one from polling district No. 2. It is claimed there are grounds for throwing out the entire vote because the judges were disqualified by reason of this error.

The contest, if started, will be the work of the Republican party, which met defeat at the polls. No definite action has yet been taken, and no one could be found today who cared to father the scheme, though several expressed a bellef that the irregularities were sufficient to justify the party in taking action.
